ABOUT THE BOOK

Follow the daring adventure of the Slade family as they answered the call of love, giving up what they knew in the UK to share their practical faith in Eastern Europe. Through personal stories, observations and pictures from each family member, colleagues and those who the Slade's served in Romania, this book is a remarkable read and one that will leave you inspired.

Phil Slade and his family packed themselves up and moved from the UK to Transylvania motivated by a love for Romania. This book captures their adventures and is an example to us all of beautiful things that happen when we follow our calling, however disruptive that may seem at first glance.

PRAISE FOR THE BOOK

The Slade family heard God's call and set off, by faith, into the unknown. They were willing to uproot their family and cross geographical and cultural barriers because they knew how important it was to share their love of Jesus with those who were yet to hear of and experience his love. The way the whole family were included in the decision to go and the ministry that followed is a great example for families who are considering following Jesus' Great Commission to, "Go and make disciples of all nations." I recommend this book to all who, recognising God's call to witness to all peoples, are asking, "What would it mean for me and my family to leave the comforts and familiarities of my own country and serve as a cross cultural missionary?"

The Road to Transylvania tells the inspirational story of a whole family's obedient response to God's call on their lives. The book provides us with a fascinating blow by blow account of the practical, relational and spiritual journey from suburban Surrey to live in a small Romanian town; how they expressed the love of God particularly to young people, many of whom had lived in a now infamous state-run orphanage.
